

Andy Yan is the director of The City Program at Simon Fraser University.

Born and raised in Vancouver, Andy Yan has extensively worked in the non-profit and private urban planning sectors with projects in the metropolitan regions of Vancouver, San Francisco, New York City, Los Angeles, and New Orleans. He specializes in the fields of urban regeneration, applied demographics, Geographic Information Systems, neighborhood development, public outreach, social media, and quantitative research.

Andy holds a Masters in Urban Planning from the University of California – Los Angeles and a Bachelor of Arts with First Class Honours distinctions in Geography and Political Science from Simon Fraser University. Andy is a registered professional planner with the Canadian Institute of Planners and a Certified Geographic Information Systems Professional.

With academic service, Andy is also an adjunct professor at the University of British Columbia School of Regional and Community Planning. He is an affiliate with the University of British Columbia's School of Architecture and Landscape Architecture Masters of Urban Design. He is also a member of the Simon Fraser University Urban Studies Advisory Council. He has been a visiting Scholar at New York University's Asian/Pacific/American Studies Institute (2002-2003, 2015-2016).

In community service, he has been a two-term Commission appointee to the City of Vancouver City Planning Commission and a former member of the City of Vancouver's Development Permit Board Advisory Panel. He was a member of the Board of Directors for the Downtown Eastside Neighborhood House.